

The training was imparted by Bret Ericson, Project Manager, Blacksmith Institute, New York, USA and Dr. Mahmood A. Khwaja, SDPI, Islamabad.

The workshop was supported in part by the Asian Development Bank through Regional Technical Assistance.

Dr. Mahmood A. Khwaja, Senior Advisor, chemicals and sustainable industrial development, SDPI recommended strict enforcement of NEQS and SMART, levy of pollution charges, waste water discharge licensing system and treatment plan, promotion of cleaner production center, BEP&BAT and sites remediation.

Dr. Khwaja informed that out of 6634 registered industries in these states, 1228 are considered highly polluting.

"The textiles, leather, food, ceramics, steel, oil refineries and oils, pharmaceutical and chemicals industries in Lahore, Faisalabad, Sialkot, Multan, Hyderabad and Rawalpindi need immediate attention due to their adverse health and environmental effects, resulting from their industrial releases" he underscored.

He called for strict regulations for pollution control, environment protection and sound management of chemicals.

Dr. Khwaja was of the view that civil society can play positive role in chemical management by building awareness and information dissemination to stakeholder including vulnerable groups through campaigns at different levels to reduce and eliminate adverse health and environment effects of toxic chemical pollutants.

In the concluding session of the workshop, Engg. Asif Shujah Khan, former Director General, Pak. EPA, Islamabad stressed the need for further and immediate work towards hazardous wastes management, as it is one of the three priority concerned areas of Pakistan environment protection Act.

He criticized the industrial sector and said, perhaps the industry does not want to be regulated. However, its time that corporate responsibility be implemented.

Hazardous waste sites are like disaster areas, with surrounding population under stress and exposed to potential serious risk to public heath and therefore, warrant immediate actions. He emphasized that one ounce of action is better than one ton of thoughts.

Dr. Bashir Ahmed, Director General of EPA Khyber-Pakhtunkhwa said that contaminated sites should be investigated and cleaned up in KPK and through out Pakistan as they pose serious threat to public health.

He said we have learnt this lesson from the contaminated site of Lehtrar, once home to tanning industry but now a densely populated residential area.

He informed government of Khyber-Pakhtunkhwa is executing a project to check soil and ground water pollution around industrial states in KPK and this workshop has given them better understanding of work to be completed.

He expressed the hope to find the support of international community to cleanup polluted sites in the province including solid waste site of Abbottabad and the pesticide store site in Peshawar.
