

Pollution peril A new study analyses the international nature of health risks from pollution. Poorer countries suffer most but their richer counterparts also feel the effect: pollution does not stop at political borders. Another report found pollution inside London Underground stations much more damaging than on the city's roads. (Pure Earth, COMEAP)

